Disinfectants and Deodorizers.

The season of the year has at length been reached when disinfectants become a necessity. For the next three months an active market may be anticipated for them, even in those quarters in which the demand is only temporary. With the grst burst of June weather, civic authorities, managers of public institutions, and even the general public waken up to a realization of the fact that they owe this amount of obedience to the great law of self-preservation. Many of the favorite disinfectants possess valuable medical properties other than that of deoderization, but it is with this quality that we have chiefly to do. The disinfectants most in request in America are chlorinated lime, carbolic acid, sulphate of iron, chloride of zinc, nitrate of lead and chloralum and bromo chloralum. There are also a large number of patent agencies which are brought into market, and which have various degrees of merit. To these must be added common and particular earths used for deodorizing purposes. Almost all of these, with the exception of the first, are used in the liquid state, and are only available when in that condition.

Chloride of lime is the oldest and the most available disinfectant on a large scale, and is perhaps the most widely useful, owing to its capabilities for general application, its moderate price, and the ease with which it can be transported. It is doubtful if it ever is likely to be superseded for what may be termed wholesale deodorization. Of all the highest class of disinfectants carbolic acid takes the lead at present in both medical and public favor. Besides its endless use in surgery, dentistry and other professional services, it takes rank as the first and most destructive agent in counteracting, not so much the effects of putrefaction of every kind, as in destroying the cause of putrefication itself. Carbolic acid was first brought into notice during the European cattle plauge of four years ago, when it was found extremely effective. The impure qualities are applicable for deodorization in the proportion of two pints of the acid to forty gallons of water.

Sulphate of iron is valuable in correcting fetid emanations, and although its use, until lately, was chiefly confined to France, it is now making vast progress in this country.

Chloride of zinc, in addition to its ordinary disinfecting qualities, when dissolved in water, is valuable when applied to ulcers, etc., belonging to the human species and animals, and finds a large sale in retail drug stores in towns and cities.

Burnett's disinfecting fluid is an aqualous solution of chloride of zinc. It is largely used for ships, hospitals, disinfecting rooms, etc., and it is claimed for it that while it destroys other odors it possessess none of its own. For disinfection, a pint of the fluid should be mixed with four gallons of water.

Nitrate of lead, besides being useful as a general deodorizer, has a healing effect on excoriated surfaces, and a solution colored is often sold as a remedy for chapped hands, etc. Ledoyen's disinfecting fluid is a solution of nitrate of led in the proportion of a drachm to an Labarraque's disinfecting fluid is useful from the fact of its absorbing carbonic acid and evolving chlorine, upon which latter quality the disinfecting power depends.

Chloralum, discovered as a disinfectant by Gramgee, of London, has secured a large patronage in this country since its introduction three years ago. Two years ago bromo-chloralum was invented, and its value is dependent not only on the properties of chloralum, but also on those of bromine, which is a disinfectant of value itself. The chief merit claimed, however, for the bromo-chloralum consists of the wider sphere of action secured by the union of the two. Chloralum is prepared from chlorine and aluminum, which last is obtained from that known in the market as cryolite from Greenland, a substance familiar to the glass manufacturers and imported by a Danish house. Bromochloralum is designed not only to deodorize, but also has antisceptic qualities, and fish and meat are not only preserved but the taint of age removed. Besides the above there are a variety of specialities for particular cases, which are mostly of limited circulation, owing to the cost of their production, and which may be divided into those directly manufactured as anti-infection agencies and those which are evolved during other sources of manufacture. -Drug Reporter.

THE THREE RICHEST MEN IN AMERICA. -The three richest men in America are William B. Astor, A. T. Stewart and Commodore Vanderbilt-all residents of New York city. Astor's wealth is mainly in real estate and its revenues; Vanderbilt's is mainly in railroad stocks and their dividends; Stewart's is in goods, houses, stores, factories, lands and stocks. The aggrogute wealth of each one of them is seventy-five and one hundred millions, which looks rather heavy. Nobody knows exactly; they couldn't tell themselves within a million or two. Those who know most about their affairs put their figures higher, and say that the income tax returns of a few years ago, which showed each of them to be worth between twenty and thirty millions, gave no proper idea of their real wealth.

Astor lives unostentatiously; Vanderbilt lives street; and Stewart lives in a marble palace on Fifth avenue, more magnificent than any other residence on the American continent, and equalled by but few of the great cities of Europe. Astor is a large, heavy man of seventy, with strong features and a rubicued face, indicative of high living; Stewart is a medium-sized man, rather slender and tall, ot seventy three, with a face like a parchment, and gives the impression of being hard up; Vanderbilt is a tall, slim, handsome, proudlooking man of nearly eighty, straight as an arrow. Astor has heirs to his estates; Vanderbilt has children to whom he can leave his fortune; Stewart is childless. Astor's public benefactions are confined to something like a couple of hundred thousand dollars, which he gave to the Astor Library, and the two golden Caudlesticks, nine feet high which the golden No. 11 caudlesticks, nine feet high, which he recently gave to Trinity Church. Vanderbilt has never GENERAL COMMISSION MERCHANTS made any public benefactions, excepting a steamship to the government during the war, till very recently when he gave a million dollars for educational purposes—one half of this sum to found a University in Tennessee, and the other half to another educational institution. Stewart has always had the reputation of being pretty close fisted; but he must be credited with his million dollar "Home for Women,"

Vanderbilt is a Methodist. Stewart is said to be inclined to thinking for himself. Stewart is a scholarly man. Vanderbilt is not.

another is blighted with our own. DISEASES OF IMPRUDENCE. When the misguided and imprudent votary of pleasure finds that he has imbibed the seeds of this painful disease, it too often happens that an ill-timed sense of shame or dread of discovery de-ters him from applying to those who, from eduters him from applying to those who, from edu-cation and respectability, can alone befriend him, delaying till the constitutional symptoms of the horrid disease makes their appearance, such as ulcerated sore throat, diseased nose, nocturnal pains in the head and limbs, dimness of sight, deafness, nodes on the shin bones and arms! blotches on the head, face and extremities, pro-gressing with frightful rapidity, till at last the palate of the mouth or the bones of the nose fall in, and the victim of this awful disease be-comes a horrid object of commisseration till death puts a period to his dreadful suffering, by sending him to that undiscovered country "from whence no traveller returns."

whence no traveller returns."

It is a melancholy fact that thousands DIE victims to this terrible disease, through falling into the hands of ignorant or unskilful PRE-TENDERS, who, by the use of that deadly Poison, Mercury, &c., destroy the constitution, and incapable of curing, keep the unhappy sufferer month after month release their recent ferer month after month taking their noxious or injurious compounds, and instead of being re stored to a renewal of Life, Vigor and Happiness in despair leaves him with ruined Health to sigh
